| Subject         | Update on Police Reorganisation  |
| Type of Item    | monitoring   |
| Action by Panel | The Panel received a verbal report from Inspector Kevin Cuffe of Hampshire Constabulary on the continuing reorganisation of the Police, with particular reference to the Fareham area. Inspector Cuffe indicated that Chief Inspector James Pegler, who had been invited to attend the meeting, was unable to be present as he was away on a course. Inspector Cuffe reported that, since his last report to the Panel on 3 June 2014, the investigation hub, based in Portsmouth, was up and running. Detectives and uniformed investigation officers located there covered the Portsmouth, Fareham, Gosport and Havant and Waterlooville areas. Response and patrol teams providing round the clock cover for Fareham, Gosport and Park Gate were temporarily operating from Fareham police station. This arrangement was under continual evaluation and a site had been identified for the teams to move into later in the year; the aspiration was for the site to be operational in July 2015. Currently the teams were reporting to Fareham Police station and then deploying to areas where it was anticipated they would be needed. There was a County-wide arrangement in place, whereby response and patrol teams from across the region were deployed where they were needed. The principal custody provision for the Fareham and Gosport areas was at Waterlooville, with Portsmouth Central as the back-up. There was currently still custody provision at Fareham Police station at weekends, but it was uncertain how long this would remain. It was anticipated that there would be a new facility built for long-term custody provision for the east Hampshire area. Neighbourhood officers were due to reach their new (reduced) level of staffing with effect from 1 April 2015. The Fareham | neighbourhood officers would continue to operate from Fareham and the constabulary's estates team was negotiating with Fareham Borough Council about their possible location at the Civic Offices, with the aspiration being from July 2015. A meeting between the parties concerned was due to take place during the week beginning 16 March 2015.

The force's control room was still in existence and operators now had the option of diverting calls to a resolution centre, where matters could be dealt with by telephone where appropriate or, if not, they could be referred to the investigation team based at Portsmouth. This system seemed to be working well and the force was investing in more officers to deal with the post call receipt demand.

Inspector Cuffe then answered members' questions concerning his report. It was further noted that: where possible, initial enquiries could be carried out by telephone, thereby avoiding the need for an officer visit and that the resolution unit was primarily concerned with crime; at that moment in time, there was one police constable and one police community support officer on duty at Fareham police station but that, generally, there were 65 response control officers (5 teams of 13 officers) based at Fareham police station and responsible for covering the wider area, of which 20-30% were on duty at any one time; after providing an initial response, these officers would pass cases to the investigations hub for follow-up and would not actually have caseloads of their own; in addition, where these teams used to have one common start time, they now had staggered start times; taking all suspects arrested to Waterlooville or Portsmouth was a drain on officer time, but that it was a situation caused by the significant reorganisations – in the last five years, over 600 posts had been lost and that, by 2017, there would be 1000 less officers in Hampshire; Park Gate police station was currently a base for a neighbourhood policing team, with the rest of the station being used by a different department; with effect from April 2015, there would be a designated PC and PCSO as the points of contact for each ward and they would be supplying their contact details to the respective ward councillors, together with head teachers of any schools in the ward; the Parkway site was currently being used by a specialist central referral unit for the whole area which had formerly been based at Netley; the initial points of contact for a member of the public wishing to speak to the police were the 101 telephone number, the Hampshire Constabulary website and an intercom facility at all police stations, even if they were closed; there were concerns at the lack of communication from the police, including the estates team, about changes and reorganisation; the new Chief Inspector for Fareham was due to take up her post in May 2015; the role of neighbourhood policing teams would be to look at ways of reducing and preventing crime but not to investigate it; and that police officers, in addition to their normal duties, worked a pattern of being on call for 24 hours a day on a one week on, two weeks off basis.

At the invitation of the Chairman, Councillor Cartwright addressed the Panel during the consideration of this item.

It was AGREED that Inspector Cuffe be thanked for his report.
