YOUR COMMENTS ON THE CASE

The Titchfield Festival theatre offers a delightful selection of productions, in a professional manner, although they are not funded by anything than the income and voluntary donations. The community focus of the theatre is vital to allow access to the arts for all. The buildings are sympathetic to the local environment, and the parking and facilities are adequate for the size of the venues. Type of productions is very different to the larger venue in Fareham Centre and therefore are targeting a different audience. I feel there is plenty of scope for both venues in an area such as Fareham, which is growing in size and the area.
